COURSE OVERVIEW

Most banknotes in circulation are tainted by cocaine or another illicit drug, suggesting they have been in contact with contaminated notes. To help analyze the degree of contamination and whether with a higher reading, the notes have been handled by people under the influence of cocaine (which is excreted in skin oils), or by being used directly to snort the drug, the Rapiscan Learning Academy has developed a training course designed for Police and Financial Investigators.

With an in-depth overview of the Rapiscan Systems Trace equipment capability, the course shows how its effective use can benefit in the testing of banknotes for the presence of drugs in forfeiture orders under The Proceeds of Crime Act 2002.

This one-day Cash Testing and the Current Drug Market course, is designed for the Police and Financial Investigators a variety of prison and security staff including; Search, Security, Post Room, Reception, Intelligence, Dog Handlers and Police Prison Liaison.
